Canongate and Tolbooth. The Canongate is one of Edinburgh's principal streets, extending from St. Mary's Street to Holyrood. About half way along its length is the Canongate Tolbooth, which dates from 1591, and is a quaint old building in the French style of architecture, with turrets and a projecting clock. Into its wall is built the pillar of the St John's Cross, to which prisoners condemned to the pillory were formerly fastened.
